R. & G. Corsets for Spring and Summer

Are here. This line of well-known Corsets is complete in styles and sizes for every figure from the slender to the stout. One particular model has a recent invention found only on R. & G. Corsets, the "Abdominal." This will be appreciated by all corset-wearing women, as it eliminates many of the discomforts that have heretofore existed. This consists of a band inside of the corset, which supports the abdomen in its normal position and takes away the strain from the hose supporters, greatly reducing the tearing of stockings and prevents the corset from riding up, which fact will be recognized as a much needed improvement. Every woman needs an abdominal support to insure good health and comfort. This Special Abdominal Corset is made of the best grade of coutil, well boned and guaranteed not to rust; $3.00

There are a number of models in this well-known make of corsets in the Corset Department. The prices are 75c to $3.00. Any and all figures can be fitted in one of these models.

STATE NORMAL

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Farmville, Va., February 17.—The class of 1912 tendered a Valentine reception to the class of 1911 on the evening of St. Valentine's Day. Reception hall, parlors and dining-room were made attractive with Cupids and hearts without number, while the general color scheme combined the colors of the Junior and senior classes, gold and brown, and red and green. The guests numbered over 300, comprising the two classes, the faculty and the home department.

An attractive program was carried out, the guests were first assembled in the auditorium for a series of tableaux, and then separated into parties, being directed by their Cupid programs to the various rooms, where each one was required to write in ten minutes a proposal in rhyme. A prize was offered in each room for the best verse, but all were read, amid much laughter and applause. Following this contest all of the parties assembled in the reception hall, where each junior was given six tiny hearts. The seniors proposed to the juniors, and every time a senior was accepted she received one of the hearts. The young woman who could boast of the greatest number of "acceptances" was awarded the prize.

In the dining-room "fortunes" of every kind were provided. The centerpiece of each table was a large heart from the center of which scarlet ribbons led to each seat, and the guests drew out a smaller heart, which gave them tiny souvenirs of the occasion. Candy hearts bore fitting mottoes and caused much merriment. The menus were printed on hearts, and the refreshments were most attractive, as were also the toasts, which were offered to the classes and to the honorary member of the senior class.

The evening closed with dancing in the reception hall, where punch was served between the dances.

President Jarman was in Richmond several days last week upon business for the school and the State Board of Education.
